The vlogger has been swept up, once again, in another very public spat, and it all goes down on Twitter. This time Jeffrey Star and Tati Westbrook are not involved, instead the founder of an athleisure brand accuses James of knocking their designs. For the past week or so, James has been wearing his new Sisters Apparel merch collection basically nonstop - a variety of cotton candy-colored sweat sets with 80s-inspired color blocking. James has worn the collection to meet fans, film TikToks, and even did his latest YouTube video (which already has 3.4M views) while wearing one of the hoodies. This content is imported from YouTube. You may be able to find the same content in a different format, or you may be able to find more information on their website. After seeing all this Ethan Klein, co-founder of streetwear brand Teddy Fresh, apparently DMed James to confront him about the similarities between his designs and Teddy Fresh's hoodies. After finding James' response unsatisfactory, he took to Twitter to vent out allIII the color blocked dirty laundry. I know we don't invent colorblocking [sic], but I have a hard time w the new James Charles Merch, it's the same exact design as Hila's, Ethan wrote. Combined with the fact that his audience is so large, many people will assume that he designed it and start accusing us of plagiarism [sic]. What do you think? It's possible it's all a completely cosmic coincidence, but he pretty much used the identical colors here too, he at least moved em around a little bit, he finished. James responded on his own Twitter and shut down the allegations altogether. When you DM'd me yesterday, I sent you the original image that inspired my collection, explained I've never seen your brand, but also asked what you wanted me to do... You didn't answer, James said. After last year, I promised to keep conversations private and create solutions, not drama. This content is imported from Twitter. The beauty guru then tweeted again, saying: @h3h3productions If you'd like to continue our conversation and find a solution, my DMs are still open! This content is imported from Twitter. Under 'post, a commenter made a very good point - if you Google pastel color block You will find endless variations of both the hoodies in question. Almost identical versions have been sold by Urban Outfitters, Topshop, Dolls Kill, Zumiez and Nike. Here are a few, just for reference. Now, to be fair, Teddy Fresh's hoodies come up in this search, front and center, but they are surrounded by lookalikes. After the back and forth, Ethan then claimed that when he spoke to James privately, he admitted that the resemblance was not a coincidence. I'm giving you permission to share our convoy. You told me you would sell them anyway, Ethan wrote, quoting tweeting James' response. You also admitted that the resemblance was not a coincidence. I dm'd you because I wanted to keep this private, but I found your answer combative and dismissive. * Sigh.* At least no one fights over vitamins this time, amiright? Follow Kelsey on Instagram! You can see a list of supported browsers in our Help Center In his latest TikTok and YouTube videos, beauty guru James Charles teased an upcoming merch collection with his popular Sisters Apparel brand: color-blocked hoodies emblazoned with the word sisters, Charles' signature term of care for his fans. The YouTube star is already facing backlash for his designs, with some saying they are clearly inspired by other products already on the market. On Thursday, YouTuber and podcaster Ethan Klein, who runs the H3H3 productions channel with his wife, Hila, suggested that Charles had copied the color palette used in hoodies from the couple's clothing brand, Teddy Fresh. I know we don't invent colorblocking, but I have a hard time w the new James Charles merch, it's the same exact design as Hila's, Klein wrote in a tweet, adding that he thought Charles' massive fanbase would falsely accuse his wife of plagiarizing the beauty guru's designs. In a follow-up post, Klein said the similarities could be an entirely cosmic coincidence - but he thought it was unlikely since Charles' merch used pretty much the identical colors. -Ethan Klein (@h3h3productions) September 18, 2020Hila Klein then shared photos of the first 2017 sketches for her color block hoodie, which revealed a pattern and color scheme similar to sisters hoodie Charles wore in a recent YouTube video.-Hila Klein (@HilaKleinH3) September 18, 2020The Kleins' tweets immediately sparked criticism of Charles, with commenters calling the beauty guru's merch a rip-off. Animator and voice actor Alex Hirsch to Klein's defense, tweeting, 100% rip rip Bridge. Your sellin' Teddy Fresh, he's sellin' Teddy Stale. It's almost exactly the same, there's no way this is a coincidence, another commenter wrote. However, other Twitter users claimed that Hila Klein's design resembled other color-blocked garments. This style has been around for a while. It's literally a 90s aesthetic, and you can find identical looks by google 90s color block hoodies like I did, and it took about 2 seconds, wrote one, posting pictures of similar color-blocked hoodies from clothing site ROMWE. I'm not even a James Charles fan, but the range here is pretty embarrassing. Charles addressed claims the Beauty YouTuber took to Twitter claiming that Klein had contacted him personally about similarities - to which he responded with a picture of inspiration to his collection and insisted he had never seen the Teddy Fresh design. Charles said he also asked what Klein wanted [him] to do but didn't get an answer. If you would like to continue our conversation and find a solution, my DMs are still open! he wrote in a follow-up tweet. -James Charles (@jamescharles) September 18, 2020Klein quickly fired back, apparently contesting Charles' account of their conversation. You said you'd sell them anyway. You also admitted that the resemblance was not a coincidence, he wrote, adding that he found Charles' response combative and dismissive. On Friday, the podcaster shared 2019 posts from Charles, with the YouTuber accusing cosmetics company Wet N Wild of ripping off his eyeshadow palette. I'm not claiming to 'own' specific colors. BUT when you copy the exact shades & layout from my palette without even trying to hide it...? Charles then tweeted, before writing in an Instagram story, that the company should have had more integrity. Hmmmmm, Klein tweeted, referring to the year-old controversy, including screenshots from Charles' Instagram story.-Ethan Klein (@h3h3productions) September 18, 2020Klein was not finished discussing Charles' designsOn Saturday, the H3 podcast cohost released screenshots of his communication with Charles.In the messages, Charles says his color block hoodie would feature the same color palette as one of the Teddy Fresh designs, but that he had not been familiar with the Kleins' brand. The new collection, he said, had been inspired by a Nike design. He went on to say that merch had already been produced, but he would talk to his team in that if they copied anything. In his final messages, Charles said there was really no competition between the two as they don't have the same fan base or demographic. -Ethan Klein (@h3h3productions) September 19, 2020In a follow-up tweet, Klein admitted that sharing screenshots would be the closest [he] can get to some sense of justice as he had no desire to bring charges against the YouTube star. Teddy Frisk Account then tweeted an altered photo of Charles wearing his new collection color block hoodie with teddy fresh logo. Big thanks to James Charles for wearing our colorblock hoodie! the tweet read.-Teddy Fresh (@teddyfresh) September 19, 2020Charles' new collection will launch on September 24. Representatives for James Charles did not immediately respond to Insider's request for comment.
